About Trust

Shree Navchetan Education Society's

The academicians and social reformers of the time felt that women's education was the key to the development of the nation. They rightly felt the need for women's education in the post-independence India. The pioneers of this institution, who themselves happened to be renowned and dedicated academicians, laid the foundation of the institution, which was then known by the name Shree Navchetan Education Society. The trust has vision...

- To provide quality education to the students.
- To provide the total growth of their social responsibilities and rights.
- To provide the total growth of their social responsibilities and rights.
- To bridge the gap between the school and the urban centers by encouraging students between them through education, uplifting and empowering women by providing education and making them socially, professionally and technically sound to meet the current national demands and making them economically self-reliant.
- To enable more and more women, especially those coming from conservative and untouchable backgrounds, to avail themselves of higher education.

About the Seminar

Higher Education Institutions are seen as academics centaures, separates from the society; due to their distinctive campuses, emphasis on research and scholarship, and singular form of governance, universities are sometime seen as academic sanctuaries, separate from the rest of society. While there is some truth to this notion, colleges, like other institutions, are also products of the society that shaped them—and they exert their own unique influence on society as well.

In 2018, with the nation and world more fast-moving and interconnected than ever, the very pressing concerns of society will be the concerns of higher education as well; and those universities that are most able to confront these challenges—by expanding their missions, reaching out to “nontraditional” students, and partnering with other institutions here and abroad—will be the most successful.

Historically and functionally, universities have always occupied an antagonistic position vis-à-vis. social developments without simply conforming to them. By generating and transmitting knowledge, universities provide an opportunity to transcend the horizons of everyday theoretical problems occurring in the societies around them. By anticipating social change, they fully live up to their roles as players in the ensuing dialogue. In recent years, the higher education landscape has become increasingly competitive. With this and other discussion the conference will be organize in the light of the following sub theme.

Sub Themes

1. Higher Education : The Key to make India a Developed Nation
2. Current trends in Higher Education Student Services
